that the sufferings of his people might be relieved by the insurance money. The thing was to prove it.

"Inquiry as to his habits developed the fact that he was a patron of the public library. I got a list of the books he read. They were mostly of a philosophical character, tending to atheism. Among the rest was a French novel which he had borrowed several times. I took it to the hotel to read and kill time. In it I found the full explanation of his suicide. The hero of the book was a poor and romantic young man. He insured his life for the benefit of his wife, and then went on an expedition to the Alps, and at the proper point made a misstep and rolled down a precipice, so laying his plans as to leave hope that he would escape unhurt and be enabled to go away from the country. His idea was to relieve the beneficiaries by means of the insurance money. He couldn't do it by his labor. The novelist made his action a noble self-sacrifice. The Oregon young man who emulated his example left himself no chance of escape and he was killed. We fitted the two cases together, and the result was the insurance policy wasn't paid."—Chicago Times.

An Ambassador's Privileges.

Hitherto—except on special occasions—this country has only been represented by Ambassadors in six European realms—the Empires of Austria, Turkey, Russia and Germany, the kingdom of Italy, and imperial, royal and republican France. Not a quarter of a century ago there were only four British embassies abroad, although the United Kingdom was, of course, diplomatically represented at every foreign court. It was not until the unification and consolidation of Germany had been completed by William I of Prussia that our Legation in Berlin became an Embassy. The achievement of Italian unity under Victor Emmanuel suggested and obtained a similar complimentary acknowledgment on the part of our gracious sovereign. It is unquestionably a judicious and popular "new departure" to emphasize, so to speak, the amicable nature of the relations happily obtaining between the two great English-speaking nations by placing our official representation in the capital of the Union upon the highest attainable footing of diplomatic dignity and distinction. An Ambassador, as the personal representative of his own sovereign, has the right of access to the monarch or chief of the State to whom he is accredited—a privilege which cannot be claimed by, although it is frequently accorded to a Minister Plenipotentiary or Envoy Extraordinary.—London Telegraph.

Came Straight from Japan.

I was privileged to see some of the gowns and other items of the trousseau of Mr. Clement Scott's bride, says a writer in the Gentlewoman, and among them was a most marvellous peignoir which deserved a better fate than to be banished to the seclusion of a dressing room.

It had come straight from Japan, and was fashioned in true Japanese style. On a bright green ground, the conventional teatray kind of oriental flowers were embroidered in gold thread and crimson, and the lining of this elaborate garment was of flamingo-red silk.

Among the maze of other fascinating gowns, the wedding dress, which was also to be travelled in, was not specially prominent, but it left upon my mind an impression of blue brocade on which were strewn baskets of pale pink roses, green shoulder 'capies, fastened with a beautiful Eastern clasp and a mass of old Italian lace.

With this was to be worn a wonderful Indian necklace composed of myriads of precious stones.

Doings of Well-Known People.

Worth's cheapest dress is $150. Three thousand marriages are performed every day all over the world.

Queen Victoria has taken 447 prizes at English cattle shows for products at her stock farm.

Both the Empress and Emperor of Germany are heavily in debt, the Empress owing one Berlin firm $40,000. The Fijians believe that the souls of all people of marriageable age who die unmarried can never enter into Heaven.

The ex-Empress Eugenie, whose tiny feet were once clothed in the daintiest and most fairy-like slippers, is suffering much from gout and rheumatism.

Mme. De Lesseps, wife of "le Grand Français," can write equally well in French and English. She is collecting her husband's private papers and correspondence, and proposes to write a book defending his course in regard to Panama.

A young woman attached to the staff of a London newspaper wore a crinoline of the vintage of 1857 on the street of that village the other day and almost caused a riot before she had progressed very far. She was obliged to seek refuge in an omnibus and was charged double fare because of her rigging.

Worth, the great Parisian man milliner, has almost discarded the Empire and taken up the 1830 style, with modifications. His sleeves are all balloon form at the top, and frills or flounces of the material or lace formed capes, pointed at the back and front and passing over the top of the balloon sleeve, forming an epaulette, thus adding considerably to the width of the wearer's shoulders. His skirts are close fitting in the front and at the sides, the fullness being quite at the back and the length moderate.

M. McINERNY.

Are we to be, or not to be, a part of the Great Republic, seems to be the burning question of the day, and one we had rather leave to wiser heads than ours to solve; and while great statesmen are wrestling with this momentous question, we want to have a little "pore-wore" with you on some other subjects, that concern you as well as ourselves.

Has it not occurred to you that you've been wearing that old hat long enough! In these progressive times if you intend to be "in it," you've got to keep pace with fashion. No matter how otherwise well dressed you may be, unless your hat is the correct thing you bear a shabby appearance.

We have already laid in a stock of the Latest Hats of the coming Spring and Summer styles, in hard felts, soft felts and straws, and including a line of the celebrated "Fidora" Hats, at present all the rage in the United States. There is therefore, no necessity for you to hang on any longer to that old Tile that bears such a strong resemblance to the hat "your father wore."

Believing that business will be better in the near future, we have not hesitated to keep our stock full in all lines. Take collars for instance: We have almost everything you could wish for. If you wear a standing collar, just come in and take a look at our "Narenta" or "Ardonia;" or if you prefer a turn down collar, try the "Winnipeg" or "Goswell;" we have have lots of others, and can't fail to suit you. Cuffs in abundance, links or otherwise.

Neckwear in profusion, scarfs windors 4-in-hands, and a special lot of "Boys' Bows;" suspenders in great variety, leather and woven ends, good strong, serviceable goods.

We might go on indefinitely, but space is valuable, and to enumerate everything we carry would fill a pretty fair sized Book. If there is anything you want in the men's line, just drop in and see us, and if we can't suit you, we don't believe any one can.

If you should want a pair of nice shoes, let us try a hand at fitting you. Did it ever occur to you

How much a man is like his shoes; For instance, both a soul may lose. Both have been tanned; Both are made tight by Cobblers;

Both get left and right; Both need a mate to be complete; And both are made to go on feet. They both need healing; oft are sold, And both in time will turn to mould. With shoes the last is first; with men The first shall be the last; and when The shoes wear out, they're mended new; When men wear out, they're men dead too.

They both are trod upon, and both Will tread on others nothing loth. Both have their ties, and both incline When polished, in the world to shine; And both peg out. Now would you choose To be a man, or be his shoes.
